“ Tom Coyne was one of the finest men I ever met or worked for. I worked for Tom as a bartender/bouncer when he owned Macs in Richland Center. Tom I was in my early 20's and Tom always treated me like a young man and not a kid. I'll never forget something he told me when I started; “Don't ever come when someone whistles or snaps their fingers - you're not a dog.” In other words, he demanded that his employees got respect, even if it cost him business. I've told that story a hundred times.

Tom had a cool swagger when he walked. His silver hair parted on the side and swept over. A no nonsense look that was at the same time lighthearted and don't bs me.

Today I'm sad. The people you hold highest are supposed to live forever. And now that I finally found him, he's gone. I wanted so bad to shake his hand one more time and thanking him for all the things he never knew he did for that young man.

I want the family to know how much I thought of Tom. And though I'm not in a hurry, I look forward to seeing him again.

The family is welcome to call me if they'd just like to talk but if not, that's ok too.

“ Tom was such a gentle hearted soul. I remember when he would walk into Coynes after his day on the market with a spring in his step and whistling. Enjoyed playing cards, many conversations at dinners in the past and just his company. You will be missed dearly my friend. Love you, Connie Wilis
